

CRVS and the eradication of poverty in Asia and the Pacific

Asia Pacific Forum on Sustainable Development

30 March 2017

Current global levels of forced displacement and statelessness

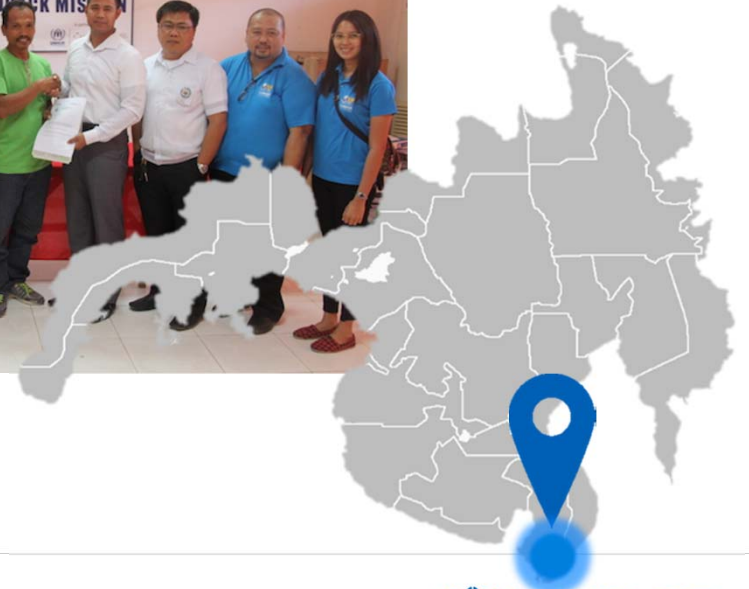

- 65.3 million forcibly displaced people
- 12.4 million people newly displaced in 2015
- 6.7 million refugees in a protracted displacement situation
- At least 10 million stateless persons

The Role of CRVS: Inclusion and Protection

The Role of CRVS: Solutions

Conclusions

- Strengthening CRVS systems can facilitate the inclusion and protection for the forcibly displaced and people at risk of statelessness
- CRVS can therefore contribute to ensuring that these groups are not left behind in the realization of sustainable development goals, including poverty eradication
